Introduction: Key points in Nonconformist research

- All non-Church of Scotland were considered Nonconformists; they comprised—
 1. Seceders or secessionists (outsider Presbyterians of the Church of Scotland—which was also Presbyterian in its form of worship)
 2. Dissenter or other churches or those who disassociated themselves from Presbyterianism and the Church of Scotland
- Online reference tools that help you identify church registers and their locations include:
 1. www.nrscotland.gov.uk/catalogue - type the town/parish name in the Search for box; and then type “CH3” or “CH10”, or “11” or “12”, etc to “16”; or “RH4” or “RH21” in the Reference box; clicking a single entry shows the archive where the record's located.
 2. www.scan.gov.uk -
- Internet Sources: Online offerings currently leans heavily in heavy favor of government-sponsored Church of Scotland whose registers hold but few marriages, very few burials—and even fewer—baptisms—of Nonconformists among Scotland's people.
- Up to 1800, Nonconformists covered about 40 percent of Scotland's population, and was by this time quickly gaining ground
- By 1851: Nonconformists, including all the Seceder Churches comprised a whopping 60 percent of the people of Scotland
- Seceder churches and Nonconformist church registers—to a fair but fractional extent—may be found at the National Archives of Scotland. Roman Catholic parish registers have been recently centralized, scanned and imaged and mostly indexed; other than these two, no other Nonconformist religions has a full complement of its church registers indexed or accessible via online at ScotlandsPeople.
 - The only other Scottish Church records database available outside of ScotlandsPeople is FamilySearch's Scottish Church records Index/database - the old (DOS) OPR—extracted from original Church of Scotland records from early to 1854. This database contains no burials.
 - The Church of Scotland (OPR) database does however include some Nonconformist church registers. [Note: The latter nonconformist church register indexes are not a part of nor incorporated into the Scotlandspeople.gov.uk website]

The FamilySearch (old DOS) version Scottish Church Records database is available at:

- Family History Library
- Family History Centers

- Scotlandspeople (FamilySearch.org shared its computerized indexes; but ScotlandsPeople indexed the extant burial registers)

HISTORICAL EVENTS AFFECTING NONCONFORMIST RESEARCH

- 1690 - Reformed Church of Scotland was formed; many left the Kirk to join
- 1691 – by this year, the Church of Scotland (a Presbyterian-based church) was governmentally established as the state church
- The Episcopal Church was mostly dissolved from 1692, although some ministers somehow retained their ministries
- The Episcopalian Act of Parliament, in 1711 afforded many Episcopalian ministers to regain their parish churches lost in 1690; it was also the year Roman Catholic parish registers mostly began
- 1733 – Associate Synod Church was formed

- 1747 – Associate Synod broke into 1) General Assoc. or Anti-burghers Presb. Church, 2) Associate Synod or Burghers Church; complaints were over patronage rights
- 1761 – Relief Presbyterian Church was started
- 1820 – United Association Secession Church commenced
- 1827 Original Secession Synod began
- Disruption of 1843-1847: nearly half (about 700 churches) of the kirk walked away from the established church and formed the United Free Presbyterian Church of Scotland; i.e. of Dundee's 17 original Church of Scotland parishes—8 turned to Seceder (mostly Free) Church congregations by 1847.

Scottish Seceder (Presbyterian) Church Records locations:

Location of Seceder church registers:

1. National Records of Scotland (visit: www.nrscotland.gov.uk) – see their online Catalogue under a) the name of the parish, b) then type “CH3”, “CH13” and “CH16” for deposited church registers
2. Any regional or city archive usually has holdings of church registers for many seceder churches and dissenter churches

Online indexes for Seceder & dissenter churches:

Sadly, few church registers for Seceder or Presbyterian splinter churches nor of dissenter church registers have been centralized, scanned/imaged, and then indexed! NRS has not chosen to do so with those (partial) collections they do possess. Though some formidable comprehensive lists have been compiled and maintained over decades to identify and catalog them, i.e. the Scottish Genealogical Society, ScotlandsPeople has made no move to centralize, image and index them as they have with the Church of Scotland parish registers and the Roman Catholic (ScotlandsPeople).

Kirk Sessions – Church of Scotland & Seceder Churches (CH3, CH13; CH16):

- “Kirk Sessions” = church courts
- Contain numerous references to our ancestors for all kinds of ‘infractions’
- Were kept on a parish level
- Don't always exist/survive
- Scanned and imaged (but not indexed)
- May be viewed only at Scotland's National Archives and/or selected (abt 15) regional archives in Scotland
- A rich treasure-trove on especially Nonconformists! A “must-use” record source

Independent or Congregationalists (CH14):

Church history:

- Introduced as early as 1707 by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel
- Wasn't established until 1790s
- Over 100 congregations by the setup of the Congregational Union - 1813
- Independents or Congregationalists were not known for record-keeping.

How to search Congregational/Independent church registers:

1. Search extant church registers at the National Records of Scotland (www.nrscotland.gov.uk) – see their online Catalogue under “CH14”
2. Search at local church, and in regional and city archives
3. Search Church of Scotland and Reformed Presbyterian Church registers as well
4. Search at/visit: ScotlandsPeople Centre, Edinburgh which has a few holdings

Scottish Episcopal Church records (CH12)

- In 1689-1690 over 2/3's or 900 parish ministers were mostly replaced by Presbyterian ministers; these registers morphed mostly into registers of the Church of Scotland
- Registers begin mostly well after the Scottish Episcopalian Act – in 1711
- By 1791 only about 40 parishes exist but grew to over 100 by 1851

Scottish Episcopal registers locations:

- The National Records of Scotland – has many lowland church registers, i.e. Edinburgh
- City and regional Archives across Scotland
- Other –
 - University of Aberdeen Special Collections Centre
 - University of Dundee's Archive Services
 - For more, see—
 1. <http://archiveshub.ac.uk> – catalogue to 2500 archives and libraries
 2. <http://nrscotland.gov.uk> – type CH3, or CH10-16; or RH4 or RH21 (Roman Catholic Church in Scotland)
 3. Original church – Google! For websites

Scotland was Roman Catholic up until early 16th century; then turned Episcopalian and sometimes Presbyterian when until at least 1690, Presbyterianism permanently replaced it

ScotlandsPeople.gov.uk:

- Holds scanned images of C. of Scot, and Catholic Parish registers—which search both
- Has published for online searches (most of) the indexes to these registers; earliest begin 1703

Baptist Church in Scotland

- 10 chapels or congregations (only) have existed in Scotland

Location of records:

Baptist Union of Scotland
12 Aytoun Road
Glasgow G41 5RT
Scotland

Methodists in Scotland (CH11):

Started as a 'movement' within the Episcopalian (Church of England) Church, but became a full-

fledged religion by the 1780's with but few chapels built

For records accessibility, visit:

1. www.nrscotland.gov.uk
2. Online catalogs to regional/city archives which have Methodist records of various groups
3. www.scotlandspeoplehub.gov.uk/pdf/church-Methodist-pdf
4. At original chapel or one, nearby

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons):

- First came to Scotland in, and established the first congregation (branch) in 1839.
- Location of church (branch) records are available through FamilySearch.org's FHCs or Family History Centers worldwide.
- Search for branch records in the online catalogue under the name[s] of the civil parish. If not available in the desired parish, search all of the contiguous parishes.
- By about 1900, there were nearly 100 branches congregations of the church in Scotland.
- Most of these records are in-process have been indexed prior to 1907

Unitarian Church (CH15):

- Was established by the 1790's
- Total of 13 churches founded in Scotland
- Records are held at the National Records of Scotland – see www.nrscotland.gov.uk; search under “CH15” to access these registers.
- Additional records may be held at local regional/city archives as well; see their online catalogs/collections for further access details

Society of Friends or Quakers (CH10):

- First congregation was founded in the 1650's at Lanarkshire (Dunbartonshire)
- Records are located under “CH10/1-4” at the National Records of Scotland (www.nrscotland.gov.uk) – see their catalogue
